

“It’s also time to change our Education system that doesn’t work for our 27-year-old daughter who has $100,000 in law school student loans, who as a municipal prosecutor, earning $12.99/hr, realized she couldn’t begin to pay those loans. Yet if she’d chosen corporate law, she would have received a signing bonus. It doesn’t work for thousands of other graduates facing staggering tuition debts while President Bush cuts 12 billion dollars in Federal Student Loans,” stated Callahan.

Callahan concluded by stating, “It’s our future and the future of our children and grandchildren. It’s time to ask someone to represent us who has no interest in becoming a professional politician, but rather someone who hopes to use the political process to become a public servant. Today, I ask for your support to become our next Congresswoman.”

Colleen and her husband Dick who is a Vietnam Veteran, have a daughter Brittney and they live on a farm outside of Peoria in Kickapoo, Illinois.
